THE ADMIRAL AND THE RABBI

By RABBI FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

Sinclair Lewis in his last novel depicts the struggles of Dr. Arrowsmith, a young physician who devotes himself to public health work. Dr. Arrowsmith's endeavours for health reform bring him into conflict with the rich and influencial dairymen in his community, who resent his interference in their business and who use their powerful political influence against him. In his fight against these vested interests, Arrowsmith stands almost alone. None of the religious teachers come to his assistance with the exception of the liberal Jewish rabbi, who speaks out in his favor and supports him in his humane work.

The rabbi who flits across the stage in Lewis' novel is one who is aware of the prophetic function of his calling, who does not hesitate to champion unpopular causes, who is willing to brave public opinion to sustain a humanitarian venture. He is the sort of rabbi whom baccalaureate speakers hold up as the ideal. He is the model urged upon theological students. It was most gratifying to see that the Jewish rabbinate had so impressed this novelist, that he makes the rabbi the liberal voice of his community. What a splendid thing it is for Jewry when its spiritual leaders are thus lauded in current literature! How much that does to nullify anti-Semitism! It is quite evident that the root for much of the prevalent Jewish hatred is due to the cruel distortions of him which have appeared in popular literature. For many Christians, the Jew is still the cruel Shylock, grasping, mercenary and thirsting for vengeance. The influence of such characters as the rabbi in "Arrowsmith" is bound to make itself felt, and is certain to compel in the long run revisions in the popular conception of the Jew.

But Lewis was not dealing with a fictitious character when he made the rabbi the liberal spokesman of his city. For that is the very role which reform rabbis in hundreds of communities have assumed. Wherever there is bigotry, prejudice, intolerance, fanaticism, narrowness of vision, be it political, economic or religious, the reform rabbi will generally be in the camp of the liberals. His tongue will plead for the broader view and interests. When the Scopes trial was being held and evolution and religion were being debated, the reform rabbis in the communities of the South stood with Scopes. One in Knoxville, Tennessee, was compelled to leave his pulpit because his congregation lacked the moral courage to uphold him in his stand for truth. When the famous steel strike occurred, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, of New York, after a thorough study of it, championed the cause of the strikers, as also did Dr. Goldenson, of Pittsburgh. When the blasphemy case occurred recently in Toronto, the rabbi was the only religious teacher publicly to raise his voice against prosecution for blasphemy. In all liberal movements, rabbis are found as leaders and champions.

But last week an interesting event occurred in Chicago, which indicates again the liberal stand reform rabbis are taking. A dinner was held on Washington's birthday at which Admiral Moffat and Rabbi Louis L. Mann of Temple Sinai were speakers. The Admiral

THE REFLEX MOVEMENTS OF THE AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS

The American Jewish Congress held its biennial session at Washington last week. Some four hundred delegates were present. Several notable addresses were delivered, particularly the one by the Christian minister, Rev. Dr. Brown, and the one by Deputy Isaac Gruenbaum, who came from Poland especially for the occasion. One or two sonorous resolutions were passed. Dr. Stephen Wise was elected president for the ensuing term, and Dr. Bernard G. Richards was instructed to order a fresh supply of Congress stationery.

Eight or nine years ago—immediately after the war, and under the influence of the crusading spirit of the war—Jewish visionaries had dreams of a united world Jewry, compactly organized for the promotion of Jewish interests, along the lines of modern democratic procedure. First there were to be Jewish Congresses wherever there were significant Jewish settlements. Then there was to be the crowning achievement of an all-embracing world-congress. These several congresses were to be the regulating and directing forces in their respective lands. The world-congress was to be the supreme instance in all Jewish affairs.

In this scheme there was implied the notion that notwithstanding the heterogeneous character of Jewish life and activities throughout the world, it was possible to subsume them under a harmonizing formula, for the advancement of some major purposes. For example, it was believed to be feasible to obtain a Jewish representation in America that could at once reflect the divergence of its Jewish interests and body forth the supposed unity of tendency and destiny that underlies its manifoldness. And the first American Jewish Congress did achieve the unification of all varieties of Jewish classes and groups. Indeed, the exigencies of its alignments were such that the representatives of the American Jewish Committee and Temple Emanuel formed a working alliance with the spokesmen of the socialist "Vorwärts" and the "Arbeiter Ring." Congresses similarly successful were held in many lands, and it was considered but a short step to the realization of the great ideal of a world-congress.

The various congresses met. They were beautiful demonstrations. However, the enthusiasm which brought them into being gradually died down. With the exception of the American Congress, not one of them had sufficient vitality for a second session. There remain but echoes of them embalmed in the archives.

The American Jewish Congress, reduced to a skeleton, still manages to exist. Now and again some event in Jewish life crops up, which tends to quicken its anaemic pulse, and a hectic flush creeps into its face, giving it the appearance of vitality. One time it is the Polish outrages against Jews which furnish the Congress with a motif for a gesture of energy. Another time, it is the stinging, blistering message of a Zangwill, which calls forth some movement of its palsied body. This time it was the outrages in Roumania which stirred it into action. Gruenbaum manipulated the pulmotor that artificially kept up its respiration.

Jewish life in America is in a chaotic state. Its contours have not been formed. Its character is in the early gestatory stage. It is

WEDDINGS

Pesner–Meyerovitch

The marriage of Miss Rose Meyerovitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Meyerovitch, to Abe N. Pesner, son of Mrs. M. Pesner, was solemnized Sunday, February 20, at 5.30, at the home of the groom, 5324 Waverley Street, Rabbi Berger officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Phil Meyerovitch, wore a gown of white crepe romaine and Chantilly lace. Her veil of silk net was arranged in cap effect with clusters of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The matrons of honour were Mrs. Phil Meyerovitch, in a gown of green taffeta, bouffant style, and a corsage of tea roses, and Mrs. I. N. Pesner, in green canton crepe with a corsage of tea roses. Dr. I. N. Pesner was best man. Mrs. J. Meyerobitch, mother of the bride, wore black canton crepe with a corsage of red roses. A dinner of seventy covers was served.

Noodleman—Pecker

The marriage of Miss Milly Pecker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Pecker, to Harry Noodleman, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. Noodleman, was solemnized Sunday, February 27, at Annex Hall, Rabbi Rosenblatt officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white georgette trimmed with sequins. Her veil was arranged with a high crown and she carried a bouquet of roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Fanny Martin, maid of honour, wore a gown of white georgette trimmed with silver and carried a bouquet of pink roses and sweet peas. Solly Pecker, brother of the bride, was best man. The bridesmaids were Misses Sarah Pecker, cousin of the bride, in peach taffeta; Yetta Wener, pale pink georgette; Sylvia Gold, blue georgette, and Sarah Goldberg, blue georgette, who carried bouquets of roses. The groomsmen were Paul Cohen, John Gold, Moe Frimkin and Jack Lipsitch. The flower girls, Sonia Lancit and Goldie Wasserman, wore frocks of mauve georgette and carried baskets of sweet peas. Solly Horovitz, the page-boy, wore a Lord Fauntleroy suit. Mrs. I. Pecker, mother of the bride, wore a gown of black canton crepe trimmed with sequins, with corsage of red roses. A reception was held for 300 guests.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancour
That for what it cost me to be free
I might have had an anchor."

Missions to the Jews among the various Christian sects must look with envy and despair upon the success the Christian Scientist Church appears to have in bringing Jews into the fold across the border. Rabbi Louis J. Schwefel, of the Adath Israel Congregation of New York, in a recent sermon attacking Christian Science and Mother Eddy, its founder, said that there are 100,000 Jews in New York City who have become Christian Scientists. He calls this movement of the Jew "the greatest defection we have had in centuries." The national organ of the Christian Scientists, The Christian Science Watchman, which uses Rabbi's Schwefel figures as propaganda, observes: "It is certainly true that the modern Jew is a progressive citizen and seeks to keep abreast of the times. Therefore there must be sound reasons for such an astonishing situation as Rabbi Schwefel declares exists."

Some of these sound reasons can always be furnished by the Jew sceptical of Jewish conversion to Christian Science or any other belief. Jews have been known to form religious affiliations for the sake of business connections or for entrée into Gentile society from which they are usually excluded in this country. These are sound reasons and there are others like them. To say that a Jew becomes a Christian Scientist out of conviction does not ring true to Jewry as a sound reason. Jewry always takes with a grain of salt the claim that a member of the group has left it for some Christian belief, a grain of salt and a compassionate smile for the Gentile so trusting as to credit a conversion as genuine. Jews who have marked talent for Christian Science often show such a puzzling dexterity for remaining Jewish at the same time. For example, there was once a lady who was absent one day from her sewing circle. When asked why she said she had stayed home to sit shiva for Mother Eddy. There are many American Jewish Christian Scientists who manage to be Christian Scientists and Jews the same week if not exactly the same evening. They are generally accepted with indulgence as being perfectly harmless by the partially de-Judaized Jewry whence they come. For a rabbi to inveigh against the Scientists and even Jews who join them permanently is not a frequent occurrence. The "defection" of the latter is not one of the major problems of American Jewry. If many Jews are lost to Christian Science there is very little real concern felt about it measured by discussion.

"With Jewish immigration virtually barred by law and with the American-born element discarding the language, the doom of Yiddish in the United States is foreseen by all. Yet it may continue to flourish for another decade, since a large proportion of its foreign-born readers are not as old as may be imagined and these people, even if they do learn to read an English newspaper, still retain an attachment for the Yiddish; sentiment and the habits of a lifetime are not so easily destroyed. But whenever it may please the Yiddish newspapers to abdicate, they will not have left the American scene without having created a marked impression upon journalism and literature in this country. Now that the German language press has lost most of its influence and prestige, the Yiddish newspapers are in the forefront of the fight against the blighting effects of industrialism and standardization upon the American mind. Among the forces that are battling for individual liberty and individual expression (no Yiddish paper, for instance, has a good word to say for Prohibition) the Yiddish press, representative of a race that is itself remarkably individualistic, cannot be overlooked and will not in after years be entirely forgotten.

"The Yiddish press in America is practically synonymous with the Yiddish press of New York. Nearly one-half of the Jews of America live in and around New York City and the proportion of Yiddish readers living in the Metropolitan District is perhaps even greater. All other cities, large or small, even those in Canada, are referred to on the East Side as die Provins. Chicago, Philadelphia, they are the Chicagoer Courier, the Philadelphier Yiddische Welt, the Clevelander Yiddische Welt, the Canader Adler and the Yiddischer Journal. They are all poor and anaemic in appearance and some have less circulation in their own localities than the New York Vorwärts. Not only the Vorwärts, but the other four New York dailies as well, carry more prestige with the Yiddish readers throughout the country than do the local papers."—American Mercury.

J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., addressed the Beal Belth lodge at an open meeting [illegible] night. His subject was the Canadian banking system. Mr. Woodsworth pointed out that the public was not given the whole truth in the matter of financial control. In Canada, financial control was highly concentrated, so much so that four of the larger banks control more than 70 per cent. of the banking business. This, added to the numerous interlooking directorates, centralizes the financial structure in the hands of only a few men. By means of a chart the speaker showed the working of the banking system. He demonstrated how credits are extended and how and by whom the currency and paper money was issued. By means of examples, he demonstrated the effect upon the working man as well as the business man of the extension of credit, with the resulting rise or fall in the cost of living. He gave a few suggestions for the revision of the banking system. He advocated the establishment of a Central Bank the same as exists in other countries, so that, in conjunction with the Government, it could take away the control of credits from private interests, and also that the Government alone should issue the metal and paper currency of the country.

in his address pleaded for a bigger army and navy, attacked pacifists and all critics of the government, and gave the usual militaristic, chauvinistic twaddle. When Rabbi Mann rose to speak, he boldly, bravely and prophetically challenged the Admiral's views. He attacked his preparedness programme. He not only defended the right to criticise the government, but urged such criticism as an imperative duty. He denounced what he called Decaturism, the theory of "my country right or wrong, my country." His speech won for him a scornful editorial in the Chicago Tribune and the title of "clerical demagogue," but it also won for him the respect of millions of liberal men and women on the continent. He has again demonstrated the determination of the reform rabbinate to espouse its prophetic function.

After Rabbi Mann's address, Admiral Moffat said that the rabbi's remarks had been in bad taste. Were they in bad taste? If so, the words of Amos of Tekoa, who spoke harshly to the holiday crowds, were in bad taste. If so, the challenging remarks of Isaiah, who rebuked his generation, were in bad taste. If so, the words of the teacher of Nazareth were in bad taste. Perhaps the Admiral was right. The rabbi's remarks were in bad taste. But it is exactly such remarks of bad taste which have won for some great souls from an admiring posterity the title, prophet.

Cash Value of Human Life is Now Tabulated

A subject which always has been an interesting speculation—how much is a man worth?—is given a new turn in figures just issued by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in conjunction with details of their business in 1926.

Each individual is worth a certain definite stated sum to himself, his family and his community, a sum which runs into thousands of dollars, even though one may not have a cent to one's name at the moment.

For many years it has been known in a vague way that human capital—that is, the lives of men, women and children—was the nation's greatest asset. But how great an asset it really was and how much it outranked the material wealth of the country—real property, live stock, machinery, agricultural and mining products and manufactured goods of all sorts—could only be conjectured.

Now it appears that a child at birth is worth $9,883, considered in terms of dollars and cents. A man aged 30, earning $60 a week, represents an economic value of $31,000, while at age 40, earning $100 a week, his economic worth is $45,670. Statistics have been gathered in relation to men workers. It is conservatively estimated that future earning capacity of women would be half that of men.

Mr. A. F. C. Fiske
Third Vice-President and Manager for Canada, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company

To rear a child from birth to age 18 costs $7,200, whether a boy or a girl. These are average figures, based on expenses in a family of five, father, mother and three children, with an income of $2,500. Being born costs $250. Food is put down at $2,500, clothing and shelter, $3,400, education $50, health, $284, recreation, $130, insurance, $54, and sundries, $570. The item of education does not appear to be adequately covered, but, as a matter of fact it is, because "shelter" includes taxes, which cover the parents' share of the community cost of education.

Figures on Canadian business of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company during 1926 show that the company issues more insurance, has more policyholders and more insurance in force in Canada than any other company. Business written in Canada in 1926 was $167,862,023, while there were 2,349,904 policyholders. Insurance in force totalled $704,911,355 in Canada. Payments to Canadian policyholders in 1926 amounted to $10,079,007.

It is interesting to note that the Metropolitan Life has a total investment in Canada of $187,770,136, of which Dominion Government Bonds comprise $48,297,078, Provincial and Municipal Bonds $40,956,969, and all other investments $98,516,089.

Rudolph Perez of Galicia

By ELBERT AIDLINE-TROMMER

When the Colonel sailed for Cuba with his Rough Riders, Simon Bernstein went with him. Not that he was militaristically inclined, not that he was in a position to say, "My country, right or wrong," for he had been only three years in America when the war with Spain broke out; not even that sympathy with the oppressed Cubans moved him to enlist. Not it was none of these motives and yet a greater and more impelling one.

Far back in his early childhood years in the small Lithuanian town where he was born and brought up. Simon had heard tales of the Spain of Torquemada and the Inquisition, of the Maranos and the bonfires of the auto-da-fé. A boy of eight, he had learned to hate Spain which had exiled his ancestors for their devotion to the faith of their fathers, for their refusal to embrace the religion of the oppressors.

And now, twenty-five years later, when he came to seek his fortune in the New World and in the three years of his stay here had already begun to work his way up as a cutter in a ladies' dress establishment, he saw, at last, the longed-for opportunity to get even with the land of Ferdinand and Isabella. Little did young Bernstein think of his old parents on the other side, nor did he stop to consider that rich and powerful Uncle Sam had enough native sons whom he could call to the colours, but with his scant command of English, and manners and mannerisms of a green Lithuanian Jew, he donned the uniform and went to war.

Simon Bernstein distinguished himself in the battle of San Juan Hill and won personal praise from "Teddy" himself. He was lightly wounded in the arm in a later skirmish and sent to a base hospital. When he recuperated, the war was over. Spain lay defeated and humiliated at the feet of Uncle Sam, and Simon knew that Jewish soldiers and Jews in other walks of life had helped a great deal in bringing about this defeat.

Meanwhile time moved on. Simon Bernstein, the cutter, became a designer, with quite a comfortable income and the beginning of the Great War found him and his family—he had married in the meantime and had two children—a boy, Jacob, and a daughter Elsie—in one of the best apartments in West Philadelphia, leading a quiet and rather happy existence. Then terrible news began to sift through from Europe. Grand Duke Nicholas, Commander-in-Chief of the Russian armies, had ordered all Jews in the war zones deported into the interior. Old men, women and children, sick Jews in the hospitals, were ruthlessly piled on freight trains, on open trucks, and sent away none knew whither, none knew to what fate . . . Bernstein's aged parents were among the deportees—at least a neighbour who had succeeded in making his way to America, told him about it. In vain, however, were his efforts to get in touch with his father and mother. Communications were slow and, besides, the Russian authorities were none too eager to exert themselves to locate a couple of old Jews.

And then came the surprise of surprises! One morning Mr. Bernstein read in the papers that the Spanish Consul in New York was instructed by his Ambassador to lend his assistance to all those eager to locate their relatives in the war-torn countries. What is more, the item read, the consul had the announcement published in all the Yiddish newspapers with a special invitation to the Jews of America to avail themselves of his services. At first Bernstein would not believe his eyes. He called up the office of a Yiddish newspaper and the man who answered the telephone confirmed the news.

"What do you think of it?" Bernstein remarked to his wife and children at the dinner table that evening. "I just can't believe it! Imagine, Spain, our ancient enemy, all of a sudden, become so friendly to us!"

"Oh, pop," Jacob replied. "You still can't get over the wound you got fighting with Teddy down in Cuba."

"No, my son," came from Bernstein with a sigh. "It isn't my wound—it is a much older sore—it is what Spain did to our fathers in the days of the Inquisition."

"But why keep brooding over it all the time?" Elsie interposed. "Let bygones be bygones. Are the Spaniards of to-day responsible for the misdeeds of their ancestors? I have met pretty nice Spaniards in my place of business."

"They can't help being nice or, at least, civil, while doing business in this country; but I am sure that if you scratch a Spaniard you'll find that he is the same fanatic and Jew-hater as his great-grandfather was centuries ago, and if only Spain had the power over Jews, who knows but she might once more turn to the methods of the Holy Inquisition?"

"Come, come, Simon, eat—your soup is getting cold," Mrs. Bernstein pleaded. As for Elsie, she pouted, but did not say another word. After dinner Bernstein decided that there was nothing like trying. He wrote a detailed letter to the Spanish Consul, and two months later he was informed that his father and mother had been located, safe and sound, in Saratov, on the Volga. Great was Bernstein's joy when the news came and he was finally in a position to communicate with his near and dear ones and send them money and supplies.

"Well, father, let's have a party to celebrate the event," proposed Jack, enthusiastically seconded by Elsie. Mr. Bernstein gave his consent readily. The party was scheduled for next Saturday night, and both Elsie and her brother got busy sending out invitations.

Both young Bernsteins were very popular with the younger set, and its members were very well represented at the party. Most of them had been to the Bernstein home before, but there were a few new faces.

"What did you say that young man's name was?" Mrs. Bernstein asked her daughter before retiring that night.

"Which one?" Elsie inquired.

"Oh, you know," Mrs. Bernstein smiled significantly. "I mean that handsome fellow with the dark complexion and such aristocratic manners. He seemed so friendly to you. Where did you meet him?"

"Why, in the office. He comes to see the boss quite frequently. Do you think him a nice fellow, mother?"

"I should say he is! How long have you known him? Does he make a fine living? What's his business? Are his people here?" And a shower of other questions followed, questions always asked in similar circumstances by loving mothers.

At first, perhaps a little unwillingly, and then with more and more enthusiasm, Elsie confided to her mother that the young man had been rather attentive to her for the last few months, that he seemed very nice, that his name was Rudolph Perez, that he was manager of an export and importing concern, and that his folks were in Europe.

"Oh, in Europe? Are they Russian or, maybe, Galician?"

"Yes, mother, he is a Galician."

"Well," Mrs. Bernstein remarked condescendingly after a pause, "even Galicians are human beings. And, then, it's up to the wife to influence her husband. It's all right. But why didn't you bring him to the house before? Such young men are rare nowadays."

Here Mr. Bernstein passed the ladies on his way to bed. "What is it all about?" he inquired, patting Elsie's head.

"Why, Simon, did you notice that young man that was so friendly with Elsie?" his wife hastened to enlighten him. "Elsie says he's been very attentive to her."

"Yes, I noticed him," Mr. Bernstein replied. "What did you say his name was?"—this to Elsie.

"Rudolph Perez."

"Perez? Is Perez his last name?"

"Yes, father. Why?"

"It's funny. Perez is a Jewish first name, but as a last name it is used only by Spaniards. I remember one of the lieutenants we captured at San Juan Hill was named Senor Perez."

"Well, father, did I say that Mr. Perez was a Jew?"

"You said that he was a Galician, didn't you?" came from Mrs. Bernstein, "and Galicians are Jews, aren't they? Of course, nothing like us Russian Jews, but Jews just the same!"

"Oh, mother you make me blush to hear you talk like that! All Jews are Jews—"

"But is your Perez a Jew?"

"No. He does come from Galicia but not from Austria. Perhaps you've heard that there is a province of Galicia in Spain, too."

"In other words, you mean to tell me that you intend to marry a non-Jew and a Spaniard into the bargain? A Spaniard whose ancestors—"

"Father," Elsie pleaded with tears in her voice, "you ought to know better than that. You ought to know that your daughter will not marry a Christian. Perez has told me time and again he is only too willing to become a Jew."

"I've heard these stories before! I don't call it becoming a Jew when one does it for the sake of marrying a nice Jewish girl. And particularly do I not trust a Spaniard."

Not a word did Elsie reply, but two days later Mr. Bernstein received the following letter from Perez:

"I don't want you to misunderstand me. It is not alone because of my love for your daughter, and God knows it is great enough—that I desire to embrace your faith. It is more than that. I am enclosing a pedigree of our family from which you will see that we are descendants in a direct line from Don Isaac Abarbanel of Spain. My ancestors have been Maranos, or secret Jews, all these years. There may be an admixture of Gentile blood in my veins but ever since my boyhood when my father told me of the glorious history of our people in Spain, of the sacrifices they had brought for our faith, I made up my mind to openly become a Jew, and I am still happier to do so to accelerate my union with your daughter."

The look in her father's eyes told Elsie without words that her happiness was also his. "I am doubly happy," Mr. Bernstein said to Elsie, "that your friend is not merely a proselyte, or convert, not a stranger seeking to enter the gates of Israel, but one of our own people returning to us, it may be, after a lapse of centuries."—Jewish Exponent.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, mineral, water power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

idle to expect of it the degree of self-consciousness which is implied in the idea of a Congress. An institution like a Congress belongs to the category of an organism. It bespeaks a co-ordination of functions among its parts, a unity of purpose among its constituents. For the present American Jewdom will have to be content with the activities of its American Jewish Committees, and its Bnai Brith lodges and the other institutions that face the world on its behalf —disconnected members without pulsating relationship to the heart of Jewish life.—A.B.B.

LOEW'S

Metro's latest screen sensation, "The Taxi Dancer," will be seen at Loew's Theatre next week, with the beautiful Joan Crawford in the role of the wonderful little heroine. "The Taxi Dancer" was directed by Harry Millarde, and is based on the novel of the same name by Robert Terry Shannon. Joan Crawford essays the part of the "taxi dancer." Owen Moore plays the part of the good-hearted crook, "Lee Rogers," who reforms in spite of himself through his association with Joslyn. Gertrude Astor has an excellent part as "Kittie Lane," the gold-digger, more sinned against than sinning. She wins the sympathy of the audience, as well as a contributing many laughs in a very difficult role. Five big feature vaudeville acts will also be shown on next week's bill.

YOUNG JUDAEA

Thursday evening, February 24, at Harbord Collegiate Gymnasium, a basket-ball game was played between the Kadimah and Jordan Clubs, in the Senior Basketball League. The Kadimah Club won, score 12-6. S. K. Daufman, M. Garfinkle and D. Green starred for the winners; P. Goldman, H. Siegal and M. Belloc for the losers. There is a four-cornered tie in the league. Champions will be declared by an elimination contest. The Kadimah Club was challenged to a bowling match by the Philos. The challenge was accepted and will be played Tuesday, March 8. Tickets for the musicale and dance at University Synagogue Chambers, March 5, at 8 p.m., from any of the members, or the secretary, Leonard Swartz, Ad. 4037. At the semi-annual elections Michael Garfinkle was elected president; Meyer Harris, vice-president; Leonard Swartz, secretary, and Herman Levine, treasurer.

LABOUR LYCEUM CAMPAIGN

The Labour Lyceum has launched a campaign for $15,000. Funds collected will be used to reduce capital indebtedness which has been outstanding against the Labour Lyceum since the property was first acquired. No portion of this money will be used directly or indirectly for running or carrying expenses. The Labour Lyceum now yields a small profit. The Lyceum venture was undertaken with insufficient capital, with the result that contractors engaged in the construction work have not been paid in full. These contractors are threatening to take legal steps if their claims are not satisfied. Jewish Labour Unions have taxed themselves to the extent of $5,000. Cheques may be mailed to the Labour Lyceum Fund, c/o H. Dworkin, 525 Dundas Street West.

The Value of Human Life at All Ages

"Broke"— but worth $79,100

Dad earns $50 a week. He has just paid the rent, the grocery bill and milk bill. He says he is "broke, but happy" . . . In reality he and his family are worth a small fortune . . . . This Canadian family represents $79,100 of the nation's wealth.

ALMOST any man will agree that his life is more valuable to himself than the things he owns. Now he can have the comfort of knowing how valuable his life is to others—from a dollar-and-cents standpoint.

To-day it is known that the lives of our men, women and children are the nation's greatest asset. The economic value of these lives completely overshadows the value of all of our material wealth.

Recent computations made by statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company show the real economic value of the lives of our people from babyhood to old age. These figures are based on the average family—with an average income—and take into consideration the average length of life of each member of the family, together with the cost of bringing children into the world, feeding them, clothing them, educating them and bringing them up to a self-supporting basis.

Long lives and short lives—small incomes and big incomes—are reckoned in these calculations. At 40, a man earning $100 a week is rated as having an economic value of $45,670. At 30, the $50-a-week man represents a value of $31,000. He had a value of $9,333 the day he was born.*

And then come the figures showing the total economic value of all the men, women and children of North America—the astounding total of 1,500 billion dollars ($1,500,000,000,000).

Perhaps the easiest way to realize this stupendous figure is to compare it with the total value of the entire material wealth of Canada and the United States.

The latest available government reports show that everything we own—land, buildings, railroads, mines, raw materials, manufactured products, crops, live stock—everything included—was close to 400 billions. Our lives are worth nearly five times as much as our property.

North America can well be proud of the additional insurance placed on the valuable lives of her people in 1926. More than 16 billion dollars ($16,000,000,000) was written and revived during the year by about 300 life insurance companies—making the total amount of life insurance in force approximately 80 billion dollars ($80,000,000,000). About one-sixth of the grand total is carried by the Metropolitan.

But while the people carry 80 billion dollars of life insurance—or only one-twentieth of the economic value of their lives—they carry more than 160 billions of insurance on property—more than one-half of its value.

You would not insure a $5,000 house for $250—one-twentieth of its value. You insure it adequately. But have you insured yourself adequately? Send for the booklet which tells you what you are worth. Study it. Then decide whether or not you carry enough insurance to protect your family.

We are rapidly gaining a better knowledge of the value of our greatest wealth—human lives.

The people of the future will better safeguard their wealth and happiness.

*If you wish to find out how much each member of your family is worth, economically, send for a booklet recently prepared by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company—It tells how a person of any age may measure the economic value of his or her life. It will be mailed free.
